Mooresville-based blueharbor bank announced Friday it has received approval to open a Statesville office at 245 E. Front St.

Former Yadkin Bank Regional President Ed Marxen will lead the Statesville office, while Doug Hendrix will be the market executive and Gerald Huffman and John Childress will be commercial lenders.

"We are very excited to have such a seasoned, well-regarded team of this caliber join our bank in Statesville," said Jim Marshall, blueharbor bank president and chief executive officer. "The reception we have seen in the community has been tremendous and very gratifying to us and to this team of bankers. We believe there is still a place for common sense to be applied in our business and these gentleman and their relationships are well suited for our style of banking."

Marshall said he anticipates the Statesville office will be ready for full-service banking on or around April 1.

Blueharbor also has branches in Mooresville and Huntersville and a loan office in Gastonia.
